Sales, conversion and ad spend review

21 OCTOBER 2026

October has been a big month for the calendar. It's selling around 9× more a day than in September, and on beauty searches shoppers are picking it over e.l.f., Sephora and Ulta. The catch is what the ads are costing: roughly $29 in clicks for every $27 calendar sold through an ad. Most of the upside is in redirecting that spend, and the category move should add to it.

Meet Your Mattes Gift Set	Beauty › Makeup › Makeup Sets	4.0%

- At 2.5%, the US listing is in line with W7's other gift sets in the US.
- In the UK the same calendar converts at around 5%, roughly double. It's the same product with the same images and reviews. The main difference is that it sits in Make-up Sets there.

- People who find it organically convert at about 3.7%. People arriving from an ad convert at about 1.8%.
- When beauty shoppers do see it, they tend to buy it. On "make up advent calendar 2026" it gets about 1 in 12 clicks but 1 in 8 purchases.
- Price is doing a lot of the work. At $27 it's about half what most beauty calendars cost ($55–60).

2 Category

Listing	Category
Beauty Blast 2026 (US)	Home & Kitchen › Home Décor Products (rank #6,663)
Same calendar in the UK	Beauty › Make-up › Make-up Sets
e.l.f., Revolution, L'Oréal, UCANBE	Beauty › Makeup › Makeup Sets
W7 Holiday Haul 2026 (US)	Home & Kitchen › Home Décor Products

We'd move it into Makeup Sets. It already shows up well when people search for beauty calendars. The weak spot is broad searches like "advent calendar 2026": Amazon files it as home décor and shows it to a mixed crowd, and it converts at about a third of the market rate there. In Makeup Sets it should be shown to more people who actually want makeup. It would also be eligible for a Best Seller badge, which tends to help both clicks and conversion. The UK listing, already in Make-up Sets, converts at around 5%.

3 Listing and mobile

No real issues here. There are 7 zoomable images, a video, A+ content that reads well on a phone, a clear title, and 5,300+ reviews averaging 4.4★. W7 is the only seller and has the Buy Box 99% of the time. We wouldn't spend time on content right now.

4 Where to push spend

This comes from Brand Analytics (Search Query Performance) for 27 Sep – 17 Oct, the three weeks since the price came down. For each search, it compares W7's share of clicks with its share of purchases.

The ratio column is purchase share divided by click share. Anything above 1× means W7 is winning more than its share of sales on that search, so more traffic there should turn into orders. Below 1× means people click through, then buy something else. "W7 sales" is the number of calendars bought from that search over the three weeks. Green rows are where to push spend, amber is hold or test, red is cut back.

- Organically it's on page one (#1–10) for almost every beauty, makeup and teen search, per Jungle Scout on 21 Oct. On the broad "advent calendar" searches it's on page 2–3.

- The ads rarely make it to the top of the page. Top-of-search share is under 5%, and none of the calendar campaigns has a top-of-search bid adjustment.
- The green searches come to roughly 170k searches a week, including Spanish, and W7 already converts above the market on all of them.

5 Where ad spend is working, and where it isn't

Campaign	Spend	Calendars sold	Ad cost per calendar	Verdict
Auto	$2,813	126	$22	BEST
Competitor product pages	$6,469	286	$23	EXPAND
Beauty Blast keywords	$9,406	364	$26	FIX move to top of search
Sponsored Brands video ($1,400/day)	$15,203	~572	~$27	TIGHTEN
General "advent calendar" terms	$14,054	330	$43	CUT loses money

The spend hasn't been wasted. Together with the price cut, it has pushed organic sales from about 7 a day to about 41. Auto and competitor product-page targeting are the cheapest ways the account is buying sales.

But every campaign is paying more than $20 in ads to sell a $27 calendar. Spend nearly tripled over two weeks, and in the latest full week each $1 of spend brought back $0.95 in sales.

6 Actions

1. Bring the general "advent calendar" campaign down from $1,000 to around $200 a day. "Advent calendar 2026" does bring in orders, so keep it on exact match with a low bid. Add negatives for needoh, squishy, dumpling, chocolate, lego, for adults, amazon beauty advent calendar and amazon advent calendar.
   That frees up about $800 a day from the one campaign that's clearly losing money.

2. Put that budget behind the green searches, at the top of the page. Use exact match on beauty advent calendar 2026, makeup advent calendar 2026, make up advent calendar 2026, luxury beauty advent calendar 2026, makeup advent calendar and advent calendar 2026 makeup/beauty. Add the teen and women's searches too, such as advent calendar 2026 teen girls, makeup advent calendar 2026 for teens and advent calendar 2026 women. Set a top-of-search adjustment of 50–100%.
   These are the searches where it already ranks on page one and wins more than its share of sales.

3. Go after rival calendars, starting with their product pages. The competitor product-page campaign is one of the cheaper ones at about $23 per calendar. Widen it to the best-selling Sephora, Ulta, e.l.f., L'Oréal and Revolution calendars. Bidding on those brand names in search is worth a small test, no more: Ulta searches convert at about the market rate, but Sephora and e.l.f. searches convert at roughly half.
   These shoppers are already looking at a $60–95 calendar. W7's is $27.

4. Add the Spanish searches calendario de adviento maquillaje and calendario de adviento.
   Around 42k searches a week. It's already on page one for both, and converts well.

5. Agree a target ad cost per calendar. We'd suggest $10–12, depending on margin, then pull bids back on anything running above it.
   It's anywhere from $22 to $43 at the moment.

6. Narrow the Sponsored Brands video ($1,400 a day) down to the green searches and W7's own brand searches. Keep a small exact-match bid on w7 advent calendar.
   It's the largest single budget. People searching for W7 by name buy it 70–90% of the time.

7. Raise a Seller Support case to move the calendar, and the Holiday Haul, into Makeup Sets.
   It should get shown to more beauty shoppers, convert better on the broad searches, and become eligible for a Best Seller badge.

7 Targets for the next 2–3 weeks

Measure	Now	Target
Ad spend as a share of total calendar sales	~63%	25–35%
Ad cost per calendar	~$29	$10–12
Conversion rate (all traffic)	2.5%	3%+ after the category move (UK: ~5%)
Calendars sold per day without an ad	~41	Rising
Top-of-search share on the green searches	<5%	20%+

In short: the calendar itself is doing well. The product, the price and the reviews are all working. What needs to change is where the ad money goes. Less on broad and off-target searches, more at the top of the beauty searches and on rival calendars' pages. Ideally this is sorted, along with the category move, before the late-November peak.

A few caveats. Organic sales are estimated by taking ad-attributed sales away from total sales. The last few days will still pick up some ad sales, because Amazon credits orders for 7 days after a click. Some of the September-to-October growth is just the season starting.
